$751.28 · ↑0.87% record	$722.82 · ↑1.43% chip-led	~$73 · bid on Hormuz strikes per Bloomberg	~$62,830 · ↓0.04% per Fortune	~32 · Fear per public feed · data drop feed reportedly returned crypto fallback

SECTION 01

Markets — Monday Reopen Reportedly Delivered a Chip-Led Record Close (S&P ↑0.87% to $751.28, Dow ↑0.42% Above $530 per the Data Drop) With AMD ↑6.61%, CRDO ↑9.77%, QCOM ↑5.80%, and TSM ↑4.06% Reversing Thursday's Give-Back — Then Overnight Iran Reportedly Fired Missiles at Two Commercial Ships in the Strait of Hormuz per Axios/Bloomberg Coverage, With Brent Reportedly Rising Toward $73 Ahead of Wednesday's Reported First Warsh-Chaired FOMC Minutes

MONDAY'S U.S. SESSION REPORTEDLY DELIVERED A REPORTED RECORD CLOSE FOR THE DOW (ABOVE 53,000 PER CNBC/ THESTREET) AND S&P 500 AS A BROAD CHIP RECOVERY REVERSED THURSDAY'S CONCENTRATED GIVE-BACK — AMD ↑6.61%, CRDO ↑9.77%, QCOM ↑5.80%, FTNT ↑3.90%, TSM ↑4.06%, MRVL ↑1.62% (RECOVERING FROM THURSDAY'S ↓9.84%), AND NXPI ↑2.62% PER THE DATA DROP — WHILE DEFENSIVES SOLD OFF (XLU ↓1.01%, XLP ↓1.05%, XLV ↓1.09%, LMT ↓1.45%) IN A COMPOSITION SIGNALING A REPORTED ROTATION BACK INTO THE AI TRADE PER YAHOO COVERAGE

For FCI's framework, Monday's cross-asset composition reads as a clean risk-on reversal at the sector level, with Tech (XLK) ↑1.65% leading and the top FCI movers concentrated in the growth-hybrid sleeve (CRDO ↑9.77%, AMD ↑6.61%, QCOM ↑5.80%, TSM ↑4.06%, VST ↑4.08%, FTNT ↑3.90%) per the data drop. Per Yahoo coverage, Big Tech (Alphabet, Apple, Meta, Tesla) reportedly led the tape as sentiment reportedly rebounded on renewed AI optimism after Foxconn's Sunday quarterly-sales beat reportedly signaled sustained AI infrastructure demand. Precious metals reportedly extended the bid with GLD ↑1.06% to $382.13 and SLV ↑1.98% to $56.11, and the digital sleeve continued its recovery with IBIT ↑3.58% to $36.12 and ETHA ↑5.37% to $13.55. The VIX proxy (UVXY) reportedly closed ↓4.07% to $23.79. Per PR Newswire and Advisor Perspectives coverage of the ISM release, the June Services PMI reportedly printed at 54.0% — the 24th consecutive month in expansion — down 0.5 pp from May's 54.5%; the Business Activity Index reportedly decreased 2.3 pp to 55.4% while the Employment Index reportedly recovered 3.3 pp to 51.2% (its first expansion in four months) and the Prices Index reportedly fell 3.6 pp to 67.7% (reportedly its first sub-70 print since February). Carson's SPY support at $645.80 remains active, well-removed from Monday's intraday range of $747.41–$752.41 per the data drop.

OVERNIGHT, THE SET PIECE REPORTEDLY SHIFTED: PER AXIOS, BLOOMBERG, AND JAPAN TIMES COVERAGE, IRAN'S REVOLUTIONARY GUARDS REPORTEDLY FIRED AT LEAST TWO MISSILES AT TWO COMMERCIAL SHIPS IN THE STRAIT OF HORMUZ MONDAY NIGHT — REPORTEDLY INCLUDING A QATARI GAS TANKER PER TIMES OF ISRAEL COVERAGE — WITH NO CASUALTIES BUT REPORTED SIGNIFICANT DAMAGE, AND BRENT REPORTEDLY RISING TOWARD $73 ON THE NEWS PER BLOOMBERG; SEPARATELY, THE UK'S REPORTED MARITIME SECURITY AGENCY REPORTEDLY CONFIRMED A TANKER FIRE AFTER A PROJECTILE STRIKE EAST OF OMAN'S LIMAH EARLY TUESDAY PER THE SAME COVERAGE. THE WEDNESDAY JULY 8 RELEASE OF THE REPORTED FIRST

WARSH-CHAired FOMC MINUTES REPORTEDLY REMAINS THE RATE-PATH SIGNAL INTO THE JULY 29 MEETING.

Per Axios and Bloomberg coverage, the overnight strikes reportedly test the late-June U.S.–Iran framework as the two sides work toward a peace agreement; per prior brief coverage, the Doha technical track is reportedly scheduled to resume around July 11 after the funeral concludes. For FCI's Energy sleeve, the reported price response — Brent reportedly climbing toward $73 from Monday's reported close near $72 per Trading Economics coverage — layers over Sunday's OPEC+ approved fifth consecutive ~188K bpd August output hike per Al Jazeera/Reuters and Saudi Aramco's reported $11 cut to Arab Light August OSP for Asia to $1.50 below Oman/Dubai (reportedly the biggest cut in more than two decades and lowest OSP since June 2020 per Reuters). Monday's data drop showed USO at $104.35 (↑0.36%), BNO at $39.94 (↑0.68%), FCI upstream mixed (CVX ↓0.65%, OKE ↓0.46%, DVN ↓0.27%, CNX ↓1.36%) as the supply-side narrative dominated ahead of the overnight strike. Per Reuters coverage cited via Al Monitor and Political Wire, President Trump is reportedly expected to signal to President Erdogan during this week's Ankara NATO summit a readiness to allow Turkey to rejoin the F-35 program — a materially constructive item for the defense sleeve read-across even as LMT reportedly closed ↓1.45% on the day. Simplicity Over Complexity.

Monday's tape confirmed the chip-led AI thesis with a record close; the overnight Hormuz strikes reportedly reinjected the geopolitical premium the market had been steadily unwinding. Research Reveals Opportunities.

Geopolitics — Iran Reportedly Fires Missiles at Two Commercial Ships in the Strait of Hormuz Monday Night per Axios/Bloomberg With No Casualties But Reported Significant Damage — Testing the Late-June U.S.-Iran Framework as the Doha Track Is Reportedly Scheduled to Resume ~July 11 per Times of Israel; Trump's Ankara NATO Summit Reportedly Sets Up an Erdogan Meeting on F-35 Reinstatement per NYT

PER AXIOS REPORTING CITING TWO U.S. OFFICIALS, CORROBORATED BY BLOOMBERG AND JAPAN TIMES COVERAGE, IRAN'S ISLAMIC REVOLUTIONARY GUARDS REPORTEDLY FIRED AT LEAST TWO MISSILES AT TWO COMMERCIAL SHIPS TRANSITING THE STRAIT OF HORMUZ MONDAY NIGHT — REPORTEDLY INCLUDING A QATARI GAS TANKER PER TIMES OF ISRAEL — WITH REPORTEDLY SIGNIFICANT DAMAGE BUT NO CASUALTIES; SEPARATELY, THE REPORTED UK MARITIME SECURITY AGENCY REPORTEDLY CONFIRMED A TANKER FIRE AFTER A PROJECTILE STRIKE EAST OF OMAN'S LIMAH EARLY TUESDAY PER THE SAME COVERAGE — THE STRIKES REPORTEDLY TEST THE LATE-JUNE FRAMEWORK WITH DOHA TECHNICAL TALKS REPORTEDLY SET TO RESUME AROUND JULY 11 PER TIMES OF ISRAEL COVERAGE AFTER THE FUNERAL CONCLUDES

For FCI's framework, the reported overnight strikes reportedly represent the first significant kinetic test of the late-June U.S.-Iran framework since the reported ceasefire was signed; per prior brief coverage citing Axios, the reported Hormuz toll dispute has remained the hardest open item in Doha, and the reported strikes reportedly land against a diplomatic pause during the Khamenei funeral window (reportedly running through July 9 per CNN/CBS coverage). Per Bloomberg coverage, Brent reportedly rose toward $73 on the news, a reversal of the Monday close near $72 per Trading Economics. For FCI's Energy sleeve, the reported price response tracks with what OilPrice-cited coverage had described as a market that had absorbed the supply-loss risk but reportedly left inventories depleted — a setup where any renewed transit friction reportedly re-injects premium quickly. Per Reuters coverage in the data drop headlines, Saudi Arabia has reportedly cut its Arab Light August OSP for Asia by $11 to $1.50 below the Oman/Dubai average — reportedly the largest single-month drop on record dating to 2003 per Reuters and reportedly the lowest OSP since June 2020 — a signal that Gulf producers are reportedly defending Asian market share as supply reportedly rises. The physical world matters.

PER NYT REPORTING CITED VIA AL MONITOR, US NEWS, AND POLITICAL WIRE, PRESIDENT TRUMP IS REPORTEDLY EXPECTED TO SIGNAL TO PRESIDENT ERDOGAN DURING THIS WEEK'S ANKARA NATO SUMMIT — BEGINNING TUESDAY EVENING PER THE SAME COVERAGE — A READINESS TO ALLOW TURKEY TO REJOIN THE F-35 STEALTH FIGHTER PROGRAM; OFFICIALS REPORTEDLY DIFFER ON THE MECHANISM TO NAVIGATE CONGRESSIONAL AND CAATSA RESTRICTIONS TIED TO TURKEY'S 2019 S-400 PURCHASE PER NYT/AL MONITOR — A MATERIALLY CONSTRUCTIVE ITEM FOR THE FCI DEFENSE SLEEVE READ-ACROSS EVEN AS LMT REPORTEDLY CLOSED ↓1.45% MONDAY ON THE BROADER DEFENSIVE GIVE-BACK

For FCI's defense sleeve, the reported F-35 restoration signal reportedly matters at the run-rate level as LMT reportedly opened Monday at $545.00 and closed at $538.00 (↓1.45%) per the data drop even as the reported $3.5B Ultra Maritime bid per prior brief coverage continues to underpin the sleeve narrative. Per Reuters and Al Jazeera coverage in the data drop headlines, explosions were reportedly heard in Damascus during President Macron's visit per a reported Syrian security source — a reminder that regional volatility beneath the diplomatic track reportedly persists. Per Samsung's own preliminary guidance released Tuesday per Reuters/Investing.com coverage, the reported Q2 preliminary operating profit is reportedly ~KRW 89.4 trillion — a reported 19-fold year-over-year jump — on a reported 44% quarter-on-quarter DRAM ASP rise and reported 53% NAND ASP rise per the same coverage; shares reportedly fell as much as 6.8% intraday against bullish buy-side expectations per TradingKey coverage, but the underlying signal reportedly confirms the reported AI capex thesis that lifted FCI chip names Monday.

On Our Radar

1. Hormuz Overnight Strikes vs. Doha Track Reset — Iran Reportedly Fired at Least Two Missiles at Two Commercial Ships in the Strait Monday Night per Axios/Bloomberg (Reportedly Including a Qatari Gas Tanker per Times of Israel) With Brent Reportedly Rising Toward $73 per Bloomberg; Doha Technical Talks Reportedly Scheduled to Resume Around July 11 per Times of Israel Coverage After the Khamenei Funeral Concludes July 9 per CNN/CBS. Per Axios and Bloomberg coverage citing U.S. officials, the reported strikes are reportedly the first significant kinetic challenge to the reported late-June U.S.–Iran framework and reportedly land during the funeral pause per prior brief coverage. Per Reuters and Al Jazeera coverage in the data drop headlines, the reported August OSP cut of $11 per barrel for Arab Light to Asia at $1.50 below Oman/Dubai reportedly reflects Aramco defending market share into a rising-supply setup; per data drop coverage citing Reuters, Saudi's cut reportedly faces skeptical Asian buyers already committed on other grades. Monday's USO closed at $104.35 (↑0.36%) and BNO at $39.94 (↑0.68%) per the data drop; FCI upstream (CVX $168.10 ↓0.65%, OKE $87.43 ↓0.46%, DVN $40.36 ↓0.27%, CNX $33.38 ↓1.36%) reportedly sat softer into the strike news, with the overnight bid reportedly setting the reopen setup for the sleeve. Carson's SPY support at $645.80 remains active per levels.json. The physical world matters.

2. Warsh-Chaired FOMC Minutes Wednesday July 8 — Reportedly the Primary Rate-Path Signal Into the July 29 Meeting per Federal Reserve Coverage; The June ISM Services PMI Reportedly Printed at 54.0% Monday (24th Consecutive Month of Expansion per PR Newswire), With the Prices Index Falling 3.6 pp to 67.7% (Reportedly First Sub-70 Print Since February) and the Employment Index Reportedly Recovering 3.3 pp to 51.2% (Reportedly First Expansion in Four Months) per the Same Release. Per Federal Reserve coverage of the June 16–17 meeting, the FOMC reportedly held the target range at 3.50–3.75% and reportedly pared cutting-bias language per CNBC; per Investing.com preview coverage, Wednesday's minutes reportedly could clarify whether Chair Warsh reportedly views the current stance as neutral or reportedly leaves the door open to a hike. Per PR Newswire and Advisor Perspectives coverage of the ISM release, the composition reportedly reads constructively for FCI's framework: prices reportedly easing while employment reportedly re-expanding after the reported +57K June payrolls miss per BLS/CNBC. Thursday delivers initial jobless claims and PEP earnings (not an FCI position); DAL reportedly reports Friday July 10 per Delta's IR calendar. Simplicity Over Complexity.

3. Samsung Q2 Preliminary Guidance — Reported ~KRW 89.4T Operating Profit (Reported 19x YoY) per Reuters/Investing.com Coverage, Reportedly Beating an LSEG SmartEstimate of Reported ~KRW 87.3T; Reported DRAM ASPs Reportedly Up 44% QoQ and Reported NAND ASPs Reportedly Up 53% QoQ per the Same Coverage — But Samsung Shares Reportedly Fell as Much as 6.8% Intraday per TradingKey Against Reported Bullish Buy-Side Expectations Above KRW 90T. For FCI's chip sleeve, the reported guidance reportedly confirms the reported AI-driven memory cycle thesis that lifted the growth-hybrid sleeve Monday (CRDO ↑9.77%, AMD ↑6.61%, QCOM ↑5.80%, TSM ↑4.06%, MRVL ↑1.62%, NXPI ↑2.62% per the data drop). Per TradingKey and Reuters coverage, Samsung reportedly plans a detailed report July 30 with segment breakdowns — the reported foundry/LSI loss trajectory reportedly the key open item. Per Yahoo coverage in the data drop, ADI reportedly closed ↑3.09% Monday on positive Entegris/ADI headlines; UBS reportedly raised MRVL PT per prior brief coverage. Research Reveals Opportunities.

4. SpaceX Reportedly Joins the Nasdaq-100 Today per Motley Fool/Seeking Alpha Coverage — Reportedly Under the Fast-Track 15-Trading-Day Inclusion Rule Following the Reported ~$75B Mid-June IPO per the Same Coverage; JPMorgan Reportedly Estimates ~$4.3B of Index-Fund Buying per Coindesk, Though Reported Historical Nasdaq-100 Additions Reportedly Average a Reported ↓1.13% First-Day Move and ↓3.41% Over Five Sessions per Motley Fool. Separately, Trump Reportedly Expected to Signal F-35 Restoration to Erdogan at the Ankara NATO Summit This Week per NYT. For FCI's framework, the reported inclusion reportedly matters for NVDA read-across and QQQ-tracking exposure but is reportedly a modest weighting (~1% per JPMorgan). Per data drop headlines citing Yahoo, the QCOM article referenced SPCX among the reported overnight trending tickers; NVDA reportedly closed ↑0.37% Monday at $195.55 per the data drop. Digital-sleeve momentum continued with IBIT ↑3.58% and ETHA ↑5.37% per the data drop, with Bitcoin reportedly trading near $62,830 (↓0.04%) per Fortune coverage; mining exposure (HUT ↑6.84%, MARA ↑4.44%) reportedly reversed the prior-week pressure. For the FCI defense sleeve, the reported F-35 signal reportedly extends the constructive program backdrop even as LMT reportedly closed ↓1.45% Monday. Avoid Erosion.
